FREEDOM OF INFORMATION (SCOTLAND) ACT 2002

I refer to your six recent requests for information which have been handled in accordance with the Freedom of Information (Scotland) Act 2002.

All six requests have been individually considered in terms of the Act and the individual reference numbers for each are included above - this combined response is for administrative purposes only.

The department is incredibly busy at the moment and it saves time and resource not to have to draft six separate documents with almost identical content, send and save six separate emails etc.

This is an administrative decision only which I trust you will understand in the circumstances.

For ease of reference, your first request is replicated below for reference.

I note that with the exception of location/ time period, all of your requests were identical - referring to Ninewells Hospital, Dundee for each year 2016 to 2021 inclusive.

Have there been any reported and documented incidents of harassment, intimidation, or public disorder, associated with either pro-life prayer vigil groups or pro-choice groups at [location], between [calendar year].

Can the details of any recorded incidents, including dates, times and exact locations please be provided. Of any reported incidents, please can you outline which resulted in arrest or conviction.

In researching your various requests, our main source of data would be the Police Scotland incident recording system - STORM.

To explain, when a matter is reported to the police - usually by 101 or 999 call - or otherwise comes to police attention, an incident will be logged on this system.

Incidents are categorised to an extent but I would stress first of all that there is no incident classification which would directly relate to the type of incident described in your request.

On the contrary, it is considered likely that such incidents could be recorded under a number of different categories depending on the circumstances - for example noise, disturbance, assault, crime in progress, concern for person etc.

As such, there is no meaningful way the incident classifications could be used to narrow down the information held in relation to each location in terms of your request.

Furthermore, it is recognised that such groups can tend to congregate around the outskirts of the hospital - the junction/ road leading up to etc.

For that reason, it was considered more likely that any incidents of relevance to your request might actually be recorded not at the exact address of the hospital but at a location in the near vicinity.

We initially carried out general incident searches for the hospital itself and I'm sure you can appreciate that even for a period of just a year, a busy hospital can be recorded as the locus for a great many incidents, each of which would have to be individually assessed for potential relevance to your request.

Taking all of the above into account, and in terms of our section 15 duty to advise and assist applicants, we have opted on this occasion to take a different approach which I trust you will find acceptable.

We have carried out a search of the incident log for the words/ phrases - 'pro-life', 'pro-choice', 'abortion', 'vigil' or 'prayer'.

We have also extended the location search to a 325m radius of the address.

I must stress that Police Scotland do not consider key word searches for specific words/ phrases to be an accurate means of analysis in most circumstances and there may well be incidents of relevance to your request which do not include the specific phrases we have included.

Whilst it would be nigh on impossible to come up with a list of comprehensive search terms, it is however considered likely that the phrases used ought to have captured any incidents of relevance.

All incidents reporting protests, demonstrations, leafleting, visitors being approached etc have been included.

Whether these could be classed as harassment/ intimidation would be entirely subjective.

A small number of incidents have not been included where it was clear from the incident description that it was not directly relevant to your request - for example where the keyword hit has been a mere coincidence rather than directly relevant.

The results of the exercise are set out below:
